

ABSTRACT

[00056] A method and apparatus for reducing power consumption of a backlight control unit of a mobile communication terminal are disclosed. The output voltage of a voltage source is measured. If the output voltage is at least a predetermined value, the output of the voltage source is used to drive a backlight illumination unit. If the output voltage is below the predetermined value, an up-converted constant voltage is used to drive the backlight illumination unit.